

You made the right choice.

When homeownership becomes unsustainable short selling your home is a tough decision, but often the best choice facing many families. The process of short selling a home can take several months and requires documentation upfront in order for your mortgage company to approve a sale price lower than what is owed on your home. You should know several things upfront:

- An approval on your request to short sale is not guaranteed, but we have a great track record and you have our word that we'll do everything we can on your behalf;
- We will need some paperwork, documentation, and releases signed upfront in order to process your application and work with your mortgage company on your behalf;
- Your mortgage company may or may not pursue legal actions, such as foreclosure, while processing your short sale application;
- Several parties, including your mortgage company, second lien holders (if applicable), and your mortgage insurance company, may all have a say in approving your short sale. We'll need information on each of these interest holders in order to successfully sell your home in a short sale transaction.

We'll be here with you every step of the way to answer any questions and keep you updated on the process and outcome.

If you have questions about this packet and the documents we're requesting, please give us a call, e-mail our friendly staff, or visit one of our offices.
